He believes there is a general disposition on the part of the county and city committees to secure the best available men, and he is confident that the primary will be satisfactory alike to the people and to the candidates.

He told a Times-Dispatch reporter last night that no one could have any conception of the amount of labor he had found it necessary to put into this work during the past six weeks. Mr. Ellyson has visited every section of the Commonwealth, he had talked with hundreds of party lenders, and he is satisfied that the party will not only have a most satisfactory primary election, but what is even better, he feels assured that those who receive the nomination will be electwho receive the nomination will be elected by a large majority on November 7th.

Mr. Ellyson added that he had watched

The convention had nominated a good ticket, he said, but his extensive correspondence as well as his personal interviews with influentially Democratic leaders, disclosed to him how great is the confidence that prevails in every district of the State at both the expectation and the determination of the Democrats to elect their candidates at the next ensuing general election.

The State Chairman says that the very fact that so many of our party men are interested in securing the nomination of their favorites on August 22d is really, after all, but a good preparation for a more important battle that is to follow. Supreme Confidence.

learned that almost up to the time of taking the vote Lyons was on the side of the Baughman report, and that his union with the other side was a surprise to Messrs. Clarke, Baughman and Lathrop. A well known lawyer, in speaking of the silence maintained by the jurrors regarding the Baughman report, said last night that anyone who read the Virginia Code would see that the oath taken by the members of the grand jury did not set out that they were required to keep secret the disclosures of the jury-room. He further sated that the question had been passed upon by the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia in the case of Little vs, the Commonwealth. In 25th Grattan, in which the court decided that a grand juror could disclosed the testimony given in the jury-room.

Possible That Revelations During Trial May Bring Husband and Wife Together.

CLIMAX CAME YESTERDAY

White on the stand the captain reiterated his story of the events leading up to the separation of himself and wife. He told of the farewell with his wife, after they had decided to separate, and when he was going to the Philippines when she affectionately called him "Tag" and kissed him good-bye. terrupted by the adjournment at noontime Monday, Attorney Smyster, for Mrs. Taggart, sought to convey the impression that Taggart done was responsible for the over-indulgence of his wife in intoxicating Piquors, and that line of intoxicating fluors, and that line of questioning will probably be pursued on Monday our way," said Taggart, describing a third year leave he had spent with other cadets in New York. In reply to a question as to how much he had drank at Fort Douglas, Taggart replied: "I daresay about the same amount you would have drank." The court room crowd burst into a roar of laughter at this.

At Camp Highwood and Fort Sheridan, year Captain Taggart had met and married "this, little woman," as Smyser invariably calls Mrs. Taggart. He supposed that she had been reared to abstain from liquors, but could not know certainly. Neither could he say she little woman" had been infatuated with never offered him liquor.

During the courtship he thought "this him. He denied that he "induced" her to drink beer when she first joined him at Plattsburg barracks.

There was talk in Wooster of a possible reconciliation of the estranged husband and wife, as a result of some of the developments of the trial, and it is pointed out that the captain, in his testimony, has been as considerate of Mrs. Taggart's feelings as he possibly could be under the direumstances.
